

At MORC, Inc., we respect your right to make the decisions that are best for you. As part of your person-centered planning process, you have the choice of inviting someone you know and trust to help create your plan and to make sure that your wants and needs are fully understood throughout the process.

A person that helps you during your person-centered planning process is called an Independent Facilitator. This person can be someone you trust, someone who has been trained in helping with person-centered plans or someone else you choose outside of your Supports Coordinator.

WHAT CAN AN INDEPENDENT FACILITATOR DO FOR YOU?

- Help you identify your goals and dreams
- Help you arrange your person-centered planning meeting
- Make sure that your meeting is focused on you
- Make sure that your needs and wants are heard and understood during the meeting
- Help you incorporate all available types of supports including natural, community and system into your plan to meet your needs

WHAT DOES AN INDEPENDENT FACILITATOR NOT DO?

- Decide what will be paid for in your plan
- Authorize your services and supports
- Benefit from the outcome of your plan

HOW CAN I FIND AN INDEPENDENT FACILITATOR?

- Ask someone you know and trust
- Ask your Support Coordinator to give you the names and resumes of facilitators who are trained and have had success coordinating plans like yours.
